

The Grimoire of Sarah Wildes, The Year of Our Lord, Sixteen Hundred and Eighty Seven.

I pass these notes and spells to my future generations, secure in the knowledge that their blood shall be pure and potent.

To Reverse the Curse The curse can only be reversed by one who is of the bloodline of the one who cast the original spell. She must gather together the following: hair from a dog who is not a dog, the jesters nephrolith, and a tear that is of dew. Wrap these in a cloth formerly worn by the victim, and say thrice over it Begone the curse. Then, bury the cloth in the ground by the victim's feet and strike down your victim with a blade of purest steel. When he arises, it shall be for his final time.	bloodline: that means only Susan can cast the spell. dog: Bobo jester's nephrolith: one of Binky's kidney stones tear of dew: A tear from Zelda. Cloth: any clothing from Lion Tamer The Knife Thrower would have these, as would the sword swallower.

To Concoct An Antidote To The Elixir Of Strength. The antidote must be prepared by two who are one. The two must mingle their blood in a phial of pure water. Surround the phial by the ring of a bell and heat it by the breath of a dragon. Allow it to cool and then drink.	This can be either the Townsheds or Alexander and Bartholomew Credenza. Ring of a bell: Daisy's engagement ring. (It is not harmed by the process.) Dragon breath: sword swallower

The Old Woman of the Woods is the spirit of the heart of the forest at night. She is cruel and dark and collects others as her slaves. She cannot move about during the day and collects emissaries to do her work for her in foreign lands for all lands without forest are alien to her. But in her element she is mighty and nearly unstoppable.

On the Flower Sprites

The Flower Sprites have lived as long as there have been flowers in the world. They are dainty, true, but do not be swayed by their fair attitudes. Some flowers have thorns.

On the Dragons of Faerie

It is said that a dragon is born in the summerlands as a human. The dragon may live as a human for as many as one thousand years. Ah, but then it matures and takes flight.

This spell will switch two of the humors of the target. You will need to collect a sample of the two humors to be switched. Place the two in a circle drawn in the dirt or sand. Three who have ken to animals must stand around the two humors and chant the words, “convert and replace, let the first be the second, replace and convert, let the second be the first.” Allow the humors to run free of their containers and rub out the circle in the ground while chanting, “allow this to be done.” And your victim shall have his humors switched.

You'll need his pee. Eeew. And his breath can be collected in a balloon.

Three with ken to animals? Lion Tamer, Bobo, and The Masked Rider
