

Morgan Lee Washington

Proprietor, Locust Creek Organic Farms
Solutions architect, Greenetics International

You knew you wanted to be a farmer ever since you were in high school. You always loved clean living, the outdoors, and healthy food. And more importantly, the opportunity to grow your own weed! Man, seriously, weed is pretty much the best.

You were doing pretty good, too - making a living selling your crops at the Las Sillas Saturday Market. Then those GEMINI people from Greenetics came and bought out your farm. It was a lot of money - too much to turn down - but you were a little bummed out. Before you realized the opportunity you had, that is.

What if you could genetically modify vegetables to produce THC? People could get high on celery!

You managed to convince a couple lab techs to do your secret project on the side (giving them access to your special blend certainly didn't hurt there) and now you've finally got it: a special gene splice that makes you feel just right. So sure, your potatoes might make people more spending-happy, just like everyone else's here, but only yours will make them truly happy.

Best of all, it breeds true, so any seeds that make it onto your neighbors' fields will just spread the joy. Soon, all of America will love eating their vegetables!

What You've Got

- A bottle of hand sanitizer - actually, it's laced with your special blend. And yes, it absorbs through skin contact at these concentrations. Honestly, you can't feel it that much these days yourself, but in the wrong, erm, hands, it could make for an interesting drive home.